ABOUT THE SUMMIT:

The National ICT Summit, under the leadership of the Ministry of Information and Communication Technology, has been running since 2014. The ICT Summit was formerly an initiative of Telecom Namibia, which later came in partnership with the government through the MICT and was phased into the National ICT Summit to be hosted annually to ensure provision of a broader spectrum of stakeholders. ICT has developed gradually over the years into a facilitator that enables the industries and many other sectors of the economy to leapfrog. ICT summit had become significant stakeholder consultative platform to break down the digital divide and has made it easy for stakeholders to have easy access to key information.

Therefore, the ICT Summit has been an essential need to develop partnerships and foster cooperation amongst different stakeholders in the ICT industry. In the modern era of technology, societies are often pronounced as "Digital Societies," and when we talk about the era of digital data-driven, the technologies are being applied in all parts of life.
